++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:

Bright with showers, some heavy with a risk of thunderstorms.

Today:

Bright spells and a scattering of showers. Any showers could be heavy and there will be the risk of thunderstorms. Low cloud and haar will affect some coastal areas, perhaps extensive through the Moray Firth.

Tonight:

Most of the showers will die out, but a few could linger into the early hours. The showers still heavy and perhaps thundery. Turning misty with hill and coastal fog.

Friday:

Much of the mist and low cloud will clear, although persisting around some coasts. Bright spells developing with scattered heavy and perhaps thundery showers. Warm and humid with light winds.

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:

Rain in the north and northwest on Saturday, brightest across the southeast. Mainly dry and bright on Sunday and Monday. Cooler and fresher than of late.
